Ken Poirot is a financial professional with over eighteen years' experience as both a successful financial advisor and sales manager. As the senior vice president and sales manager for Frost Investment Services, the brokerage department of Frost Bank (NYSE:CFR), he led his department to four consecutive years of double-digit revenue growth, increasing revenue by over 83 percent while substantially increasing the profit margin. During these same four years, the financial advisors he coached increased their individual production from an average of less than $25,000 in revenue per month to over $41,000. Additionally, he has consistently increased sales by double digits as a regional manager at various other firms, including Guaranty Bank and JPMorgan Chase.

He is a coach, consultant, scientist, author, and public speaker, currently residing in the Houston suburb of Richmond, Texas.

GA=T+E means "Greatest Achievement equals Time plus Energy." The book starts out by admitting it is a motivational book, and it mentions sales several times. The key advice is to write down specific goals and remind yourself of those goals constantly, then apply time and energy toward achieving the goals. Along the way the book mentions several very useful tools for dealing with other people. There is a quiz to help you identify your personality type, and a lot of good information about body language and the ability to use what you know about personality type and how a person learns to achieve the goal you want to achieve through the help of others. There are many books written over the decades that have similar advice. Maxwell Maltz's "Psyco-Cybernetics," Napoleon Hill's "Think and Grow Rich," and numerous books by Dale Carnegie all contain the same kind of advice. Napoleon Hill states you should write the goal on a piece of paper and put it in your wallet, post it on your shaving mirror, and constantly keep the goal in front of your eyes and you will achieve that goal. Maltz's technique is ready, fire, aim. The idea is that one should start moving toward the goal, while visualizing it very distinctly, and your automatic guidance system will take over and you will hit your target goal. Visualizing the goal as clearly and distinctly as possible - using every sense you have - is a key to Maltz's ideas. Mr. Poirot says much the same thing in a truncated fashion. The author is very helpful when he advises "know yourself" and then know others and how they are wired. Being able to disarm an angry person in a confrontation is important, and Mr. Poirot gives excellent advice there.
